

JERRY ON THE JOB

ENEMY OF LIFE IS WORRY

And It Is Also Largely a Matter of Habit, Which May in a Measure Be Overcome.

Bravery in the face of only possible death, as on the battle field, and bravery in the face of certain death, as in the case of a Titanic shipwreck, are of course two very different things. The danger of the battle field is much harder to meet because of its uncertainty. Men easily summon courage to meet the inevitable.

It is the fear of the mishaps and perils of ordinary life—all our doubts, worries, anxieties, forebodings, solitudes, morbidities, apprehensions of illness or of poverty—that need most to be met and overcome. A vast literature has sprung up within the last two decades, telling us how to be forewarned and forearmed against all real and imaginary evils.

The gist of that doctrine, boiled down into two words is: Don't worry. If you really must worry, then worry as little as you can. If you find yourself in sudden peril or emergency, regard the situation calmly and keep very cool. If you are in imminent danger of being run over by a motor car, preserve your presence of mind, for motorists assert that it is only the people who lose their heads who get run over.

Exactly how a nervous person, man or woman, is to preserve the requisite presence of mind in a great and sudden danger has never been adequately set forth, though many very entertaining volumes have been written to prove the folly of fear.

BONE TO GO WITH THE MEAT

Moral in Hannibal's Terse Summing Up of Situation That Would Have Left Him Helpless.

A New York newspaper said the other day that Mr. Lloyd George, the British chancellor of the exchequer, fostered schemes for "the permanent pauperization of the people."

This newspaper had in mind the old age pension system. An old age pension is the exorbitant sum of $125 a week, allowed to destitute persons of good character who are past seventy. It is a fact that in England farmhands are lucky if they get $4 a week. Most of them get $3.50. That is the scale of wages.

"They who begrudge the British poor their old age pension," said J. Phelps Stokes, "remind me of the slave owner of Malden."

"This canny Yankee had a slave who had been in the family till he was seventy years old. Seeing that there was very little more work left in the old man, the owner sent for him one day and said pompously:

"Hannibal, my friend, you've been a faithful servant to me and my father before me. I have long been thinking what I could do to reward your devotion. I now give you your freedom. You are henceforth your own master, Hannibal. You are henceforth your own man."

"Hannibal scratched his gray wool, shook his head, and answered with a sly chuckle:

"No no, massa. You et do meat, how you mus' eat a bone."

VACUUM CLEANER'S LIMITATIONS.

I shall not soon forget my brief visit to the ashman's home, where I found "himself" and "herself" sitting at leisure in one of the two rooms of their cabin, surrounded by their entire possessions. All their bottles, dishes, cooking utensils stood about them on their unclean floor, amid random piles of dirt. Their faces wore an air of pleased expectancy. They were waiting, they said, for the vacuum cleaner. Vacuum cleaner, indeed! Nothing but yellow soap and hot, hot water and scouring soap could have made that room fit for human habitation. This memory is one of the many reasons why I pin a towel around my head and dust my beloved books myself, fingering them anxiously to see if aught in leaf or binding has come to harm. The word vacuum is unthinkable in connection with any one of them. I sometimes think, as the opened page perhaps betrays me, and I sit down, in all the confusion, to joy and brief oblivion—Atlantic.

Second Thoughts in Duel.

In the history of dueling it has seldom happened that neither adversary would fire upon the other. Such a case has just occurred at Moscow, where, after an altercation in a tramway-car, a young staff lieutenant challenged a retired general of over sixty to a duel.

The challenge was accepted, and an encounter with pistols was arranged in a wood. When the signal

VITAMINES SURVIVE COOKING.

Dr. Leonard Hill, the famous London physician, contributes to the discussion on vitamins the assertion that those contained in wheat are not destroyed by baking nor are those that prevent scurvy killed by boiling. He says all the evidence goes to show that the vitamins in milk are unaffected by pasteurization and that sterilized milk is therefore suitable for children.

NO NEED TO GIVE UP GAMES

Men of Middle Age Will Feel Better If They Occasionally Indulge in Favorite Pastimes.

The age at which men find themselves compelled by pressure of business or the cares of life or by physical infirmity to give up their favorite game is advancing, says the Youth's Companion. Once upon a time games were almost exclusively for those who were still in school or in college.

When a boy took up what was depressingly referred to as "the serious business of life" he was expected to abandon the frivolous point of view that playing games was supposed to denote. The boys of that period are today serving a late apprenticeship at the game of golf or spending frequent afternoons as spectators of professional ball games.

Having found out for themselves that such early deprivation is a mistake, they do not impose it on their sons. Innumerable Americans are nearing middle age who are almost as active on the tennis courts or on the golf links as in the days of their youth.

Football, of course, they have had to give up; it cannot be played as the casual recreation of a busy man. To baseball some men cling, although with difficulty; it requires a larger number of players than is readily available. Yet, on holiday occasions, when middle aged men long out of practice engage in baseball, there will always be a fair proportion of them who show that they retain much of their juvenile skill and alertness.

They do not slide to bases, but they field the ball cleanly and bat vigorously, and not only feel themselves that with a little practice they could, in the vernacular, "come back." The giving up of games should be so gradual, so voluntary, that it involves no sense of loss or of sacrifice. Generally speaking, so long as a man has an impulse and a desire to play a game he will be the better for yielding to it. That is the wisdom that the new generation has learned.

SPEECH THAT WON THE GIRL

Really Marvelous Combination of Words Left the More Humble Suitor Simply Nowhere.

J. B. McGhee of Roswell, N. M., writes to tell of a negro girl who had two "cuddled" suitors, says the Kansas City Star. One was a hard working negro who always had a job, but was a little short on style. The other never worked, but wore fine clothes and adorned the street corners, and was without money most of the time. Both wanted to marry the girl and she, although strongly in favor of style herself, had a strong hankering after the one with the steady job. So she decided she would invite them both to dinner, wait on them herself, and the one who had the best manners she would accept. Accordingly they came to dinner.

She first waited on Jim, the hard working negro, and said: "Have sugar and cream in your coffee, Mr. Jim?" "Cream only, if you please, ma'am," replied Jim.

Then to the stylish suitor. "Have sugar and cream in your coffee, Mr. Sambo?" "Both if you please, Miss Dinah," said Sambo, and he added: "Miss Dinah, you knows de homojonah, rajikal, trajical, incomprehensible, compound extract of de root-a-root-toot on de sugar, mixed wid de double distilled compound delectabilities ob de cream, makes de coffee obsequious."

He got the girl.

King Louis' Brief Triumph.

One hundred years ago Louis XVIII, who with the overthrow of Napoleon had ended his long exile in England and had returned to France, made his formal entry into Paris to ascend the throne of his ancestors. The grandsons of Napoleon's old guard lined the streets of the French capital and shouts of joy greeted the royal procession as it made its way to Notre Dame. Rides the king, in the open carriage drawn by eight white horses, was seated the duchess of Angoulême, formerly the royal princess, who had been under her uncle's protection ever since those who were nearest and dearest to her had died on the guillotine during the reign of terror.

On entering the palace of the Tuilleries, which she had last left when a child 22 years previously, the duchess fainted in the arms of her uncle, the king.

Love Your Work.

Do not look at your work as a dull duty. If you choose you can make it interesting. Throw your heart into it, master its meaning, trace out the causes and previous history, consider it in all its bearings, think how many even the humblest labor may benefit, and there is scarcely one of our duties which we may not look to with enthusiasm. You will get to love your work, and if you do it with delight you will do it with ease. Even if at first you find this impossible, if for a time it seems mere drudgery, this may be just what you require; it may be good like mountain air to brace your character.—Lord Avebury.

Typhoid and Tuberculosis.

Col. C. E. Woodruff of the United States Army Medical corps has discovered that typhoid fever leaves its victims peculiarly susceptible to tuberculosis, the chief reason being the great lowering of the vital power of resistance to the bacilli of this disease.

MAKING WAR UPON INSECTS

Often Found More Effective to Use Mechanical Means Than That of Hand or Repellents.

In the small garden, hand methods of fighting insects are usually employed; and it is often found more effective to protect the plant by mechanical means than to kill the insects. Thus, cut worms may be prevented from destroying newly transplanted cabbages and tomatoes by wrapping a piece of heavy paper around the stem of each plant at the time of transplanting. This method is fully as effective as scattering poisoned bran mash about the garden a day or two before setting the plants. Likewise the striped beetles which invariably attack cucumbers, melons and squashes, can be kept away from the plants by a covering of mosquito bar or cheese cloth stretched over a light frame or bottomless box made for each hill. This is a more effective method than the use of repellents, like turpentine or crude carbolic acid, mixed with ashes or sand plaster, and is well adapted to the small garden, where only a few hills of the vine crops are grown.

When plants are attacked by any of the larger insects, like tomato worms or celery caterpillars, the quickest way to dispose of the insects is to knock them off and crush them under foot. Hand picking may also be employed for destroying the eggs of squash bugs and potato beetles. For some of the smaller leaf-eating insects, it may be necessary to resort to the use of spray materials. In the small garden these can usually be applied with sufficient thoroughness by the use of a sprinkling can or an atomizer.

KEEP THE WOODCHUCK AWAY

Cotton Sealed in Bisulphid and Placed in Hole Is Good Way of Getting Rid of Rodents.

(By F. L. WASHBURN, Minnesota Experiment Station.)

The woodchuck, or "ground hog" is so destructive to gardens in some countries in this section that a few remedial measures may be of interest. White muslin strips may be tied to the peavine supports about a foot above the ground, at intervals of about a foot in a row, to keep the animal away. Cotton or calum may be wrapped around a stone soaked in carbon bisulphid, and the mass rolled into the hole as far as possible. In order that the fumes may have the fullest possible effect, close the hole as tightly as possible. A good marksman with a rifle, stationed where he can secure a good view of the infested field, may prove effective. Blasting powder and a long fuse are sometimes used and so is the steel trap.

Chicago Grain.

Chicago, Sept. 18.—Strength of prices at Liverpool tended today to lift the wheat market here. After starting 1-10 to 1-8 higher, values suffered a decided setback, but then rallied completely.

Corn appeared to be governed wholly by wheat. The opening which varied from last night's close to 1-16 higher, was followed by a general decline. All of the losses were subsequently wiped out.

The close was unsettled at a net advance of 1-16 1-8.
